Special care has been taken, by introducing ventilators, to render the room cool and airy, and these desirable qualities have been gained, as any one can observe by comparing the temperature in it with that in any store near by. Too little attention is generally paid to the subject of ventilation here in erecting dwellings and stores. As a specimen of architecture purely Hawaiianthe bricks being all of home manufacture, as are also the iron shutters and other iron-work-constructed with special reference to our warm climate. this store may serve as a model. A PRINCELY DISH .- They do enjoy good things up at the Ulupalakua Plantation. We have noticed elsewhere some sugar that will make any confectioner's mouth water; and now we have to notice some vegetables received by the Kate Lee yesterday, which it will be hard to beat anywhere. Two monstrous heads of cabbage weighing eleven pounds each, a head of cauli-flower about as large and heavy, and several stalks of celery twelve or fifteen inches long. These samples show what skill will do in such a favorable locality as Ulupalakua which is one of the most Paradisiacal spots on these islands. We shall never forget being treated, two or three years ago, to a dinner of roast peacock on this same plantation. Whether it was the skill of the cook, or the peculiar richness of this princely Planter's Hoe Handles, 4 ft 3 in. and 2 ft 4 in. dish, our appetite was demoralized, and we have ever since been craving for a second treat of what can't be found anywhere else but in Pekin, Jeddo and Ulupalakua. At last, however, the poor horse was found, pack-saddle, bundles and all, submerged in the Bishop's eistern, and was there floundering about for his life, his nose just above water. And yet, the person calling him-Kaawa and Kahana.

Now for Waialee: In 1862, long before the new school law came into operation, before the present Board of Education was formed, and before Mr. fornander became School Inspector, I, being then chool Inspector for this district, discontinued the chool at Waialee, because there were less than eight children attending it. The funds of the distriet would not allow of a school being kept open for so small a number, and the then Board of Education sanctioned my action in the matter, having been previously consulted. From that time up to the present there has not been a sufficient number of children within two miles of the school bouse to warrant me in opening a school there. A new school house was urgently required at Hannia, where there are about twenty children. I consulted an experienced practical carpenter and builder, (whose advice I am glad to follow in my own affairs.) as to whether it would be more economica to take down the old building and transport the materials to Haunis, or to seil the building for what it would fetch and buy new materials with the proceeds. After a careful inspection of new materials with the process. After a carear inspection of the building, he said that I ought by all means to sell the old building as the price of it would purchase materials of more value for a new building. I therefore acted in the matter pre-cisely as I should have done had I been dealing with my even private property, and with the sanction of the present Board of Education, I sold the old school house at Walaice. I then obtamed from the Board a sum equal to the added amounts of the proceeds of the school houses sold, and built a good and sub-stantial school house at Hanula, and after it was built and occupied I sold the remains of the old school house there. which was past repair. > New York, August 30 .- The banquet at Delmonico's, last night, was a very splendid affairs; Mayor Hoffman presided. Speeches were made by the President and Mr. Seward. The following are the principal passages of the President's speech : "We have here those who took active part in the on one hand (pointing to Gen. Grant,) and the navy the fleet with coal. on the other (pointing to Admiral Farragut) These gentlemen have performed their part in restoring the country to its present condition, and it would be wrong in me if I should omit to say that the Secretary of State has performed his part. As to the part the humble individual who now addresses you took in that struggle in the suppression of the rebellion and the restoration of the country, I will say nothing. though I will say, in summing up, that the Government has discharged its duty; but there is something else to be performed-work not done. We have forcibly established that a State has no right to leave the Union, and when those States are again resuming their relations with the Federal Government, as far as it lies in them, we find that when they seek to have their friends admitted to Congress, there are men in that body who, in violation of our great Charter of Liberty, teny their right to be represented, and refuse to admit their representatives into Congress. The query comes up before us-Will we subnit to the will of the American people? or submit to this practical dissolution and this practical assertion of the doctrine that they have already repudiated and overthrown? The issue is before you. Let me ask the intelligent audience, not in language of declamation, but in a spirit of Christianity and sound philosophy, are we prepared to renew those scenes through which we have just passed? Are we again to see one portion of this country arrayed in deadly conflict against another portion, as we have seen them arrayed? Or shall we not make every effort to have all parties, and all the people of the country again united in harmony and brotherhood? Will heir offer be accepted ? Do all want a Union again ? I have said before and now repeat, I do not want to let them back into the Union degraded and debased. They would not be fit to form a part of this moral American family. I want them to come back with all their manbood." Subsequently the President was serenaded, and made another speech from the balcony of the Hotel, saying "he thanked God that the people had, through their representatives at the Philadelphia Convention, imposed a sentence on those who opposed the restoration of the Union, and that the people, obeying the great law of gravitation which could banish any movement pertaining to the disruption of the Union. had sent forth their edict, like a blast of light, that would exercise a powerful influence throughout the United States, that the Union must be preserved, as originally established under the Constitution. He had not been mistaken in believing that there was an overruling Providence in the movements of the peoole. He believed that the great truth, for proclaiming which he had been denounced, was being carried out, and that the voice of the people was the voice of God. [Cheers.] There was now a great groundswell that would reach the traitors in the Norththat the union of these States must be preserved. He had begun in 1861 to oppose any encroachment upon the Union, and had continued to fight against such attempts at the Southern portion of the circle; yet there were those who made an attack upon the magic circle; who had passed round to the other extrimity. Should be name them? [Yes, and hang them, too.] They had named him and denounced him in the Legislative Government as a traitor, when he, as the Executive of the nation, was determined to do his duty under the Constitution. They were traitors, having extended their arms to the archives of the State and trampled the Constitution of their fathers under foot. When these events were told to them by himself, on the anniversary of the birthday of the Father of our Country, why it was undignified and unbecoming, though it was right for them to charge him with being a traitor and with having abandoned the party that elected him. He challenged to-day the whole Congress in the aggregate. with the exception of those who took their stand by the Constitution, to come forward and put their finger on the slightest violation or departure in his course from the resolutions passed at Baltimore, upon which he was elected; but, because he had refused to obey those who had abandoned those principles, twenty-five officers. Mr. Johnson concluded by manifested on this occasion. He was repeatedly interrupted with cheers during his speech. Gen. Grant said : " All I can say is, if the President and his Cabinet had kept their resolution, made in secret session, to leave the Admiral and myself to do all the talking [cheers and laughter], there would be but little said. I am very exhausted, and it would be impossible for me to address you further."

Admiral Farragut said at the banquet: "I was invited to accompany the President to the West, where I have not been for so many years, and where I naturally felt an inclination to go. I was taught in that good school where so invitation from my Commander-in-Chief was always a pleasant duty to perform. If the President or Mr. Seward had known minutes, or five sentences of common sense, should be excluded, he would not have made that speech stating that we were to be the sentors of the day.

PHILADELPHIA, August 17-Extensive preparations are making to have the Convention of Southern Unionists, which meets here in September, an imposing affair and the indications promise a large attendance, although the condition of society South has been such as to prevent holding local Conventions to appoint delegates. Govenor Hamilton, of Texas, and Durand, of New Orleans, and Haven and others prominent in the late New Orleans matters, are en roufe. It is understood that the gentlemen who come from the South will engage in the canvass of the Northern States until election.

New York, Aug. 17 .- Govenor Fenton has requested Senators Morgan and Harris to attend the Convention of Southern Unionists at Philadelphia, and assure these true and tried friends of the Union that the Union party in New York fully appreciates their continued self scacrificing efforts to place the States lately in revolt upon a just and stable basis, and that it sympathises with them and sincerely desires the re-establishment of loyal self-government in those States as soon as consistent with safety and future European News. New York, August, 22 .- By the Persia's mails it is ascertained that the account of the Guy Fawkes plot to blow up the House of Parliment, reported by the Cable, was greatly exaggerated. Nine pounds of powder and a slow match were picked up by a policeman on duty. The object is not apparent.

The London News announces that the patronage of the Atlantic Cable had become so great that the Directors had in contemplation the establishment of a new scale of prices for first, second and third class messages, according to priority, the latter to be at the same terms as now charged.
